The main church building of the Monastery of Dečani is a masterpiece of the Romanesque style in the Balkans. It features a prominent central entrance with a large semi-circular archway, flanked by smaller windows. The facade is constructed from light-colored stone with decorative elements like blind arcades and a small bell tower on the roof. To the left, a smaller building, likely a part of the monastery complex, is visible. The entire structure is set against a clear sky, emphasizing its architectural details.
