

cotto in the upper chamber above the only shop of the place, hard by the Duomo. Vino cotto is really "cooked wine", that is to say, the fermentation has been arrested by heating the must after the grapes have been pressed. The result is excellent to the palate, but the drink is heady, and the drive back to Zara hardly long enough to let one sleep it off.